

Annuity Intelligence Report

July 3, 2019

Fixed annuity and income annuity rates decreased further in July, as Treasury Yields fell below 2.00% as of yesterday. The Fed is likely to cut short-term rates in July. Unless the rate cut is 0.50% rather than 0.25%, it shouldn't impact annuity pricing (since the smaller cut is already factored in).

10-YEAR AND 30-YEAR TREASURY YIELDS

Treasury Yields fell further throughout June. The market now believes the Fed will cut short-term interest rates by more than 0.50% before the end of 2019, a significant shift from the beginning of the year (when most assumed rates would hold steady) and mid-last year (when market participants assumed the Fed would continue hiking rates in 2019).
